Warm welcome and orientations for the new semester

As the new semester begins, the University of Taipei International Affairs Office hosts several welcome and orientation programs for our international students. The goals of these meetings are to express UT teachers' and all administrative staff's welcome and care, to understand students' learning situations and life adaptations, and to maintain good communication between students and UT.

This is an opportunity for us to inform our international students about relevant regulations, such as course selection, visa and residence issues. We also invited department heads and tutors to take advantage of this opportunity to communicate with students and provide pertinent guidance and assistance. International students can also interact with their classmates and student ambassadors. Students can ask questions and seek advice, as well as share their experiences. All participants thought it was useful and urged the IAO to hold similar meetings more frequently.
